At least four journalists have been detained in police raids since 20 January 2018 as part of a social media crackdown on individuals who shared critical comments or news regarding the 'Operation Olive Branch', which was launched by the Turkish army on the Syrian town of Afrin.

Van-based journalist Idris Yılmaz, was taken into custody on 21 January following a police raid on his house in Van province. He was ordered arrested on 23 January 2018 on charges of "making terrorist propaganda". His house has been raided by the police on 20 March 2018 and according to his wife, his family members intimidated.

On 22 January, İshak Karakaş, editor-in-chief of Halkın Nabzı newspaper and columnist for Artı Gerçek, was taken into custody during a police raid at his home in Istanbul. An Istanbul court formally arrested Karakaş on 26 January. His social media posts criticising the Turkish military's operation in Afrin have been used as criminal evidence.

Mezopotamya news agency reporter Seda Taşkın was detained on 22 January during a police raid on her home in Ankara. Taşkın was arrested on 23 January on "membership in a terrorist organization" charges.

On 23 January, Haydar Ergül, an editor for the Demokratik Modernite magazine, who had been in custody since he was detained at the Diyarbakır Airport on 16 January, was arrested by an Istanbul court on charges of "making terrorist propaganda" and "membership in a terrorist organisation".

UPDATES

NEW

05 Apr 2019: On 26 March 2019, the 28th High Criminal Court of Istanbul convicted İshak Karakaş of "systematically disseminating propaganda for a terrorist organisation" and sentenced him to a prison term of 1 year, 6 months and 22 days. The court deferred the sentence.
