The Federation of Unions of Journalists (FeSP) was born on 2001 to integrate the independent Unions of Journalists from the Autonomous Regions in Spain. As their members, FeSP defends the labour and professional rights of journalists, an Statute of Professional Journalist that ensure their independence of political and economical powers, and implementation of the European Code of Ethics of Journalism sanctioned by the Council of Europe. Its ultimate goal is to guarantee the democratic right of citizens to receive accurate and plural information.

Manu Mediavilla is freelance since July-2010; he writes mainly about Health and Social matters, including the special Blog on the 50th anniversary of Amnesty International published by AI-Spain. He worked before, from 1978 to 2010, in the Vocento Group of Communication: he was International editor of the Basque newspaper 'El Correo'; Correspondent in London, Buenos Aires and Mexico; journalist Envoy to Baghdad, Amman and Jerusalem during the first Gulf War; and journalistic Envoy to many NGO projects and medical congresses all over the world.
